THE NEWSLETTER OF NEW COVENANT SCHOOLS

I AM A SCIENCE NERD, AND SO ARE MY STUDENTS

by Jimmy Kirshberger

*T*he universe is whispering to us, not in an audible voice, of course, but in very low energy radio waves. These waves, undetectable without special telescopes, are emitted by hydrogen gas deep in space, and from them scientists have learned more about star formation, the surface of Venus, and the supermassive black hole at the center of our galaxy.

This spring, New Covenant students in eighth grade had the opportunity to travel to Green Bank, West Virginia to learn more about the cutting-edge science of radio astronomy. Green Bank is home to the largest fully steerable telescope in the world, a 485-foot tall "satellite dish" with a diameter over 100 meters. Our students made the trip into the National Radio Quiet Zone, where radio transmissions are heavily restricted. They are so restricted that residents nearby live without cell phone service, broadcast television, microwaves, and Wi-Fi, so as to avoid interference with the astronomical observations that take place there.

Our students received quick in-service on a smaller telescope - it was only 40 feet! - then spent several hours operating the telescope independently and collecting radio signals from the night sky. Much of the data they assembled appeared to be nothing more than squiggly lines on a piece of paper, but upon further examination, they had obtained enough information in one night of observation to get an understanding that we live in a disc-shaped What's New?

This spring the Gryphon Garden was ready for its first harvest. Students across the grades started seedlings in their classrooms under the watchful eye of Heidi Heaton and moved them to the box beds as the weather warmed. As students finish the final week of school their vegetables are ready for harvest. Mason Bryars (right) gets busy picking snap peas.

SCOTT BORAH Armed with a willingness to work, singleness of mind, and hopeful outlook, senior Scott Borah engaged in his post-graduation admissions process early in his junior year. His mission: to gain placement at the Apprentice School at the world-renowned Newport News Shipyard, the heavy-hitter of United States marine vessel design and construction. Admission to this position entails a series of gateway examinations, including academic expertise (especially math), fitness tests, interviews, and security clearance to name a few. We are pleased to announce that Scott has won admission to a class of less than 200 selected from more than 3,000 applicants to the program. He will begin his studies in September.

MICHAEL MINNICK The William and Mary Leadership Award is presented to the one student who best exemplifies the spirit of New Covenant Schools. Award recipients are selected because of their demonstration of the following: inspirational leadership, outstanding scholarship, and unwavering loyalty to the high school and community. The 2019 recipient of this award is junior Michael Minnick.

ANDREW DENEEN Each year the Optimist Club of Lynchburg presents a drama award to one high school student from each school in the city. This year New Covenant's drama award recipient is senior Andrew Deneen. Year after year, he has been a faithful member of Panache, usually helping to paint the sets as well as act, and always willing and ready to accept any role given him to make each play a success. Andrew is a great character actor and has poured his own personality into each role he has played. Notable roles were Lazar Wolf in Fiddler on the Roof and Alf the sailor in Peter and the Starcatcher. He also has a great stage voice, one that enunciates very clearly and never needs a microphone! His dedication to our program is unmatched by any other student; he has performed in at least one show each year since 6th grade! He received his award at a special luncheon on May 16.

NICK TOONE The National Society Daughters of the American Revolution annually invites seniors to participate in their local chapter scholarship competition. The process begins with a faculty nomination of a senior who exhibits dependability, service, leadership, and patriotism. Senior Nick Toone secured the vote and proceeded through the three-stage competition in which he created a resume, secured faculty recommendations, and answered a timed essay prompt. Within a two-hour timeframe, Nick aptly and winsomely answered the loaded question: "What new challenges will America face as we move forward into the future?" We are pleased to announce that Nick is the 2019 DAR James River Chapter scholarship winner.

Congratulations to Tessa Hackenbracht for achieving Distinguished Scholar Recognition on the Classic Learning Test(CLT10). Congratulations to Phoebe Prillaman for achieving Regional Scholar Recognition on the Classic Learning Test (CLT10).

NEW COVENANT STUDENTS COMPETE IN STATE TOURNAMENT FOR TRACK AND FIELD

Seventeen athletes from the School of Rhetoric competed in the VISA State Tournament for track and field in Richmond, VA on Saturday, May 18. More than fifty schools were entered in the all-day event which took place under cloudless skies and temperatures in the low 90's.

New Covenant's track and field team is only in its third season under the leadership of Carl Stamey and Chris Deneen. In order to compete at the state level athletes must qualify in regular seasonal meets with minimum times, while relay teams are automatically entered. The team was not large enough to compete in all events, so the goal was improve times and "PR's" (personal records).

Several students did just that. The women's 400 meter relay team bested its time by 10 seconds, while Emilee Newsome improved her discus throw by over 13 feet.

Thaddaeus Heaton, who set the New Covenant school record for the 400 meter dash shaved more than a second off his time. The men's 4x100 meter relay team improved its time by over 4 seconds with the smoothest baton hand-off's of the year finishing 7th overall. Brie Olson placed sixth overall in the women's 100 meter dash, an impressive finish for a freshman competing in her first state meet (she's fast!).

See back page for official posted times.

spinning galaxy populated by nebulous gases and billions of stars.

Rebekah Bryant said the highlight for her was when “we used a radio telescope and proved that the Milky Way is a spinning disk by looking at the data we collected.” The whole experience offered our students an invaluable opportunity to see what scientific research actually looks like. Much of the time spent by scientists collecting data is somewhat tedious and not very glamorous. Likewise, much of our students’ time in the underground bunker controlling the telescope was spent making marks on printer readouts and writing down numbers, the complete significance of which was murky to them.

It wasn’t until the next day’s data analysis project that the true significance of their findings was revealed. There were moments of excitement when students working underground were still able to identify a satellite whizzing by overhead in the dark, simply by reading the “spike” in their radio wave sheet. It was refreshing to see our students in a completely “tech-free” environment literally cheering about a blip on a data sheet because they understood what it was. Of course, their excitement was tempered slightly when we explained that the reading was more likely to be from a satellite than an alien spacecraft. But they were collecting data, drawing conclusions, and rejoicing in the discovery.

And that warmed my nerdy little heart.
